Remembering Julio Baquero By Barry Ramey

From a halfway house in Miami FL, while Barry still endures the prosecution of the government, he is more worried about others than himself. Barry and his fiancé continue to go through funds in this process Barry points your attention to a family that will never be the same.

In the Gateway Pundit article written by Barry he tells of the man (Julio) he came across in prison, how Julio ended up there, and speaks on how they were both spending their time while being held in federal prison. Barry also talks of the love Julio had for his country, his wife (his high school sweetheart), and their three children. The article continues documenting Julio's health battle in the federal prison system here in America, not a third world country. While Barry gives an account as to who one of his fellow J6ers was he also asks for the assistance of the American people as the Baquero family faces their first Christmas alone without Julio. J6 Christmas Drive The Third Christmas

For three years now Patriot Mail Project has organized letters to the incarcerated as well as those who are home enduring the weight of the government. Every Christmas they keep up with the ever-changing addresses of the detained and take on the task of making sure every J6ers child they are aware of has a Christmas provided for them. As the number of arrests climbs so do the number of children who will not have a parent (usually the provider) at their festivities this year. You can donate at <https://www.patriotmailproject.com/2024christmasdrive> Help these children have Christmas!

Wal Mart Better Watch Out TAYLOR JOHNATAKIS (29838509)

Date: 12/6/2024 9:05:51 PM

All,

We had a pretty good laugh tonight; Wal-Mart better watch out!

Every evening, we gather a group of 7-9 gentlemen to watch an hour of cable news. We usually start off with Laura Ingram, jump to Rob Schmitt and occasionally check in with Joy Reid and Erin Burnett. Tonight, on Joy Reid's show, there was some handwringing over Presidential Pardons, and how Justice John Roberts said that the legislature couldn't do anything about pardon power, because it is essentially absolute. He is right...over history, lots of pardons have been objectionable. While there is some tradition and precedent involved, there have been some real eyebrow raising pardons for people who committed some serious crimes...

However, the Pardon power, granted to 'the peoples' sole representative, the Office of the President, is Equities last stand. Equity deals with the intercourse of men with men (living people with living people) (USA. Constitution: article 3, paragraph 2, "...the judicial power shall preside in all cases of LAW and EQUITY). There are times that the legislatures write bad LAW, there are times when prosecutors violate living people's rights under color of LAW, there are times Judges follow the LAW despite their 'better judgement'. The LAW is held sacrosanct, as it should and those who have taken an Oath to it will follow it, even when IT, the LAW, does injury. Well-meaning legislatures, prosecutors, judges and other constitutional officers can actually do harm and injury in the name of the LAW. There are times when the LAW fails, where the coldness and inhuman LAW can injure. Our founding fathers left one final check on the power of LAW. The people, through the Pardon power, in an act of Equity, can extend a Pardon to those who are injured by LAW, the Pardon Power is the check and balance to THE LAW, it was designed as such, it was bestowed on 'the people's' sole representative, the President. The Pardon power ensures that a living being, a Moral Sentient Being, can provide ultimate remedy where the LAW fails.

Tonight, we had a good laugh, because Joy Reid, while acknowledging the ultimate authority of a President to extend a Pardon, made mention that Donald Trump was about 'to pardon over 1,000 violent insurrectionists', and 'they will be released back into the community and will cause all kinds of trouble at your local Wal-Marts and with Local Law enforcement'. LOL, the whole group laughed, sitting in on this news hour were two very docile J6ers, everyone looked at us and laughed, we are like Lambs among Wolves in here!

When dealing with pardons, and the politics of pardons, it is best to remember the phrase: "Better ten guilty men go free, then one innocent man be imprisoned". There will always be eye raising pardons, there will always be those, who for their 'connections' received undeserved pardons...but to those few (or in January 6 cases, the thousands) who DO deserve a pardon, it's a price worth paying...Just ask someone like Alice Johnson, Mike Flynn or Roger Stone...We should never lobby for the pardon power to be diminished, it is Equities last stand, it is 'the people's' last remedy.

Taylor

*In our modern political climate, DEI (Diversity Equity and Inclusion) has given Equity a bad name. Equity is a form of Equality, but Equality is not Equity. The word Equity has been hijacked, 90% of the time, when you hear Equity in the media, or some pundit dismissing Equity, they MEAN Equality. Equity IS constitutional, Equality is not. Equity is a starting point, Equality is a finishing point. Equity is also a specific jurisprudence that was merged in our federal courts in 1938, then with the adoption of the rules of Criminal and Civil Procedure later one to simplify thing. Equity and Equality are different, we should be wise to correct those who say Equity, when they mean Equality.

P.S. We are anticipating good things in the coming year, but my family could use your help getting us there, if you are able to help my wife and children financially, your contributions will be greatly appreciated. May God bless you in your Abundance.

Nick Searcy The Clay & Buck Show

Last Friday, December 6, Nick Searcy called into the Clay & Buck show and explained why he believed ALL J6ers should receive pardons. Searcy used the air time to explain what occurred with Ronald McAbee and Victoria White on January 6th 2021, what they were charged with, sentenced to, and led that into why he stands for pardons for all of the defendants with January defendants. You can find the audio clip in its entirety on clayandbuck.com (Image taken from clayandbuck.com)

Enrique Tarrío On J6 Pardons

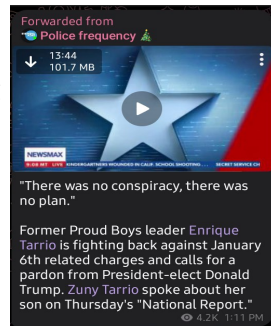

The Gateway Pundit article about Enrique Tarrío (J6er with the longest sentence, although he was not in DC on the 6th) details, both how desperate many of those incarcerated for that day were to see or hear that Trump had been reelected. There were many communications the days following full of excitement and anticipation Trump would pardon the J6ers on day one as he had said. There is also a detailed account of diesel therapy and the mental tug of war that occurs in those incarcerated.

The Newsmax article tells of Tarrío showing up to testify in the trial of a retired police officer from VA. The police officer is accused of warning Tarrío the police were looking for him and the reason why. Enrique had only recently decided he would show up and testify as Trump will soon be in office and he expects a pardon coming his way.

Billy Chrestman Exposing the Feds

Billy Chrestman takes to podcasts to tell his story. Only this time instead of simply his J6 story he tells of how he was set up, long before traveling to DC, and had his life affected from the time he met a specific individual. From losing his job due to being doxed, his home going into foreclosure due to losing his job, and then having his way to DC paid for and that being the only reason he was able to go and all the things that raise questions there.

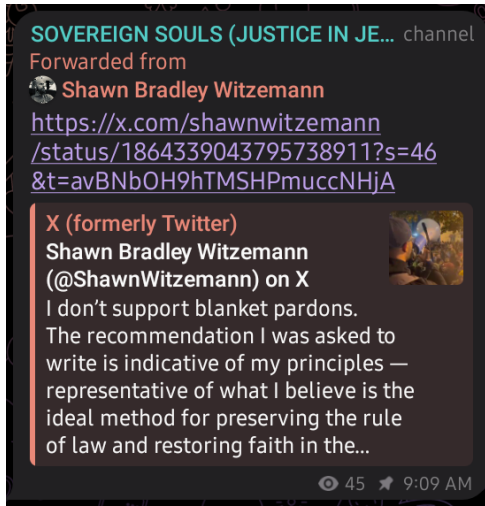

Billy does talk about how grateful he his youngest daughter was not at his house the morning the military vehicle with a gunner in the top pulled up on his lawn, caused chaos for his family, and kidnapped him and held him for nearly 4 years. Billy also mentions several others who were around that day and how he is happy to hear the release of some of his fellow J6ers.

Have you heard of the Chrestman 6? Billy explains how his judge legislated from the bench and created 6 reasons (excuses) to hold J6ers without bond. This “Chrestman 6” made its way through the judges ruling over J6ers in the DC federal courthouse and became the standard for denying bond and holding men and women captive.

Pardons for Some J6ers From a J6er Shawn Bradley Witzemann

Shawn Bradley Witzemann endured the persecution by the government for daring to document the things that occurred on January 6th. While many are of the opinion that J6ers should all receive a pardon from the incoming president Shawn has a differing opinion and is putting it forward for others to consider.

Shawn has spent his time looking into and having conversations with people who study the events of January 6th. He has also had a hand in creating one of the numerous documentaries. Taking in and studying all this information he cannot support blanket pardons for all. One of the few people who do not support blanket pardons he has a right and his own reasons to stand on that.

James Grant's Journey Through Prison to God

In the latest article by James Grant, he talks of his journey through a few of the first facilities he found himself in. On this seemingly low spot of the journey is where he found God. He like many was walking toward God before his arrest. And one day during moves he saw a message for himself specifically.

As is the case with all the J6ers who have endured time behind bars or sentenced to probation they are all struggling financially. Any assistance given to any of the J6ers is much appreciated and helps more than most people realize. Many of the J6ers are still without employment despite trying to obtain it. FBI Agent Convicted Of Robbing J6ers & Others

If you live in the Houston area and have been raided by the FBI, please do not decide it is just how things are. We, as a country, need a serious turnaround in many areas. Perhaps the most agreed upon one is the FBI.

The FBI just had one of their own convicted on robbery charges after walking into people's homes and taking their personal belongings. It has happened to both J6ers and non J6ers. J6er or not no one should have their home beat on to get a person to come out, especially when an agent is going to come behind someone and take what is theirs.
